Sharon Y. Irving: Miriam Stirl Endowed Term Chair in Nutrition

Penn Nursing’s Sharon Y. Irving, an associate professor in the clinician educator track and vice-chair of the department of ambulatory and community health, has been appointed the Miriam Stirl Endowed Term Chair in Nutrition. She also practices as a pediatric nurse practitioner at Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP), where she provides patient care in the pediatric intensive care and progressive care units.

Dr. Irving’s scholarship focuses on the nutrition status of critically-ill children. Her work in this area has changed practice at both CHOP and other children’s hospitals around the country. For example, Dr. Irving co-founded and led a multi-disciplinary ICU-pediatric nutrition team (ICU-PNUT) in designing and implementing the first nutrition pathway to improve nutrition delivery to infants and children during and immediately following critical illness at CHOP. Her work has led to more careful placement of feeding tubes while simultaneously reducing the amount of radiation exposure these vulnerable children receive.

Dr. Irving has been recognized for the impact of her scholarship with the American Society for Parenteral and Enteral Nutrition’s (AS-PEN) Distinguished Nutrition Support Nurse Service Award, and induction as a fellow of the American Academy of Nursing (2016); and induction as a fellow of the American College of Critical Care Medicine and the American Society for Parenteral and Enteral Nutrition. She also practiced as a pediatric nurse practitioner at Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP), where she provides patient care in the pediatric intensive care and progressive care units.

Brigitte Weinsteiger: Gershwind & Bennett Family Senior Associate Vice Provost for Collections and Scholarly Communications at Penn Libraries

The University of Pennsylvania Libraries have announced the appointment of Brigitte Weinsteiger as the Gershwind & Bennett Family Senior Associate Vice Provost for Collections and Scholarly Communications. This appointment reflects the expansion of Ms. Weinsteiger’s role since she was named Associate Vice Provost in 2020 (Almanac May 12, 2020). A burgeoning area of focus in her new role is support for the Penn Libraries’ fundraising priorities for collections and information resources, which bolster Penn’s missions of research, teaching, and learning. Ms. Weinsteiger will help build and grow endowments for the libraries’ deep and distinctive collections, ensuring a strategic match between scholarly content needs and the resources necessary to address them.

“Brigitte continues to propel the Penn Libraries to ever-greater impact and influence nationally and internationally,” said Constantia Constantiou, the H. Carton Rogers III Vice Provost and Director of Libraries. “Under her leadership, we have made great strides in our strategic goals and fundraising priorities to advance information equity and ensure access to the scholarly and cultural record in all forms. I look forward to working with Brigitte even more closely in her new role to advance collections and scholarly communications as we carry out the shared vision of the Penn Libraries strategic plan.”

Ms. Weinsteiger has been consistently recognized in the library system for her ability to manage large, complex projects from ideation to fundraising to implementation. She leads a team of 115 staff, in addition to 200 students and interns, with direct oversight of the libraries’ information budget of $27 million.

“I am deeply grateful to the committee members of the Red and Blue Advisory Committee, in close collaboration with the entire University community, will guide our efforts to answer these questions. The committee comprises Penn faculty, students, and staff whose membership can be found here: www.tomorrow-together.upenn.edu. They will engage broadly and make recommendations for potential areas of strategic priority for Penn. These recommendations will underpin the strategic framework for Penn’s future direction, which will be shared with the Penn community in summer 2023.”

Weinsteiger said, “I am honored by this opportunity to further awareness of the libraries’ incredible impact on the Penn community and the world, and to bring a dynamic collections-focused perspective to fundraising endeavors.”

As Senior Associate Vice Provost, Ms. Weinsteiger will continue to lead a diverse portfolio of areas, including collection strategy, encompassing the collection development and assessment programs; preservation, including the Steven Miller Conservation Laboratory, physical processing, the exhibits program, and digital preservation; scholarly communications, including the author services and copyright advisory programs; academic engagement, including the liaison program and support for teaching and learning, as well as support for Penn First Plus students; community engagement, encompassing the libraries’ outreach to the local school district and literacy initiatives in Philadelphia; and research services, comprised of research support, digital fabrication, and other initiatives.

A Message from the President

Announcing Tomorrow, Together

October 11, 2022

To the University Community,

Penn’s future has never been brighter thanks to every member of our University community. We now have an historic opportunity to envision where Penn goes from here. I am writing to invite you to join as Penn plans for tomorrow, together. Led by a Red and Blue Advisory Committee, we are embarking on a university-wide effort to inform strategic next steps for Penn.

We undertake this work by building on centuries of Penn success, reaching back to our founding when Benjamin Franklin proposed a revolutionary institution of higher learning. Yet, one of our University’s hallmarks is that success has never slowed our pace. Among Penn’s defining traits is our forward-looking and inventive spirit—I have called it Penn’s virtuous impatience. We are impatient to create and convey knowledge and to share our ingenuity to help make life better.

Penn’s future is very bright. At the same time, our local community, nation, and world face many challenges. To help ensure a brighter future for all, we ask: What does the world need from Penn? How do we cultivate a community that will rise to that challenge?

The Red and Blue Advisory Committee, in close collaboration with the entire University community, will guide our efforts to answer these questions. The committee comprises Penn faculty, students, and staff whose membership can be found here: www.tomorrow-together.upenn.edu. They will engage broadly and make recommendations for potential areas of strategic priority for Penn. These recommendations will underpin the strategic framework for Penn’s future direction, which will be shared with the Penn community in summer 2023.

I am deeply grateful to the committee members. Special thanks to John L. Jackson, Jr., Walter H. Annenberg Dean of the Annenberg School (continued on page 3)

Faculty Senate Executive Committee Actions

Wednesday, October 12, 2022

Report from the Tri-Chairs. Faculty Senate Chair Vivian Gadsden reported on several matters:

- Faculty are encouraged to contribute to the Penn’s Way campaign, with hundreds of charity options for which to make contributions. The campaign runs through November 18.
- The Tri-Chairs issued a statement on current events in Iran on October 13.
- Additional seminars of the Faculty Senate Seminar Series are under development for the coming year, including topics related to returning to the classroom, local engagement, and the climate emergency.
- The Tri-Chairs are developing internal guidelines on ways that statements on important matters can be made that are both timely and meaningful within the context of faculty academic responsibilities. Comments are welcomed as to how those guidelines might be developed.

Update from the Office of the President. President Liz Magill highlighted for SEC members some of the priorities she is working on as President. President Magill said that Penn as a community is in a position of “enviable strength” as an institution and is eager to discover what it can do next and better. She noted that the Red and Blue Advisory Committee recently held its first meeting. The committee is a pan-university exercise intended to involve the entire Penn community on thinking about our aspirations and priorities for the near future. A series of thought-provoking questions guides the committee’s initial work, and contributions and feedback from the community are welcomed. President Magill then addressed questions from SEC members.

Consultative Committee for the Selection of a Provost. SEC members joined the Zoom meeting, already in progress, that was convened by the Consultative Committee for the Selection of a Provost to respond to questions and receive feedback from faculty members on the qualities desired in Penn’s next provost. All faculty members were invited separately via email by the Consultative Committee.

Supporting Penn Faculty Research Engagements in the Current Climate. Vice Provost for Research Dawn Bonnell reported on her office’s efforts to support faculty research following racism and hostility targeting persons of Asian descent in the past eight years. The 2015 arrest of Xiaoxing Xi, of Temple University, was the first of many cases dropped by prosecutors due to lack of evidence. The U.S. Department of Justice’s China Initiative, begun in 2018, unfairly targeted Chinese and Chinese American researchers based on ethnicity. Acts of racism exacerbated in the face of COVID-19 caused increased hostility. Before 2018, Penn provided proactive support to the research community by reaffirming its commitment to global engagement; supporting safety in the community; supporting Asian students, postdocs, scholars’ travel, and visas; and enabling and protecting Penn’s researchers.

National Drug-Free Workplace Week

National Drug-Free Work Week is October 17 through October 23. For the health and safety of the Penn community, the University of Pennsylvania is committed to maintaining a drug-free workplace. Drug and alcohol abuse endangers individual users, as well as their family, friends, and coworkers. The use of any substance that impairs your workplace judgment or abilities puts you, your colleagues, and Penn students at risk.

Please take the time to review the University’s drug and alcohol policies.

Penn’s Drug and Alcohol Policies

Penn prohibits the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, sale, possession, or use of any drug by its employees in its workplace. Complete policy details are available online:

- Penn’s Drug-Free Workplace Policy for faculty and staff
- Penn’s Alcohol and Other Drug Policy

Understanding Addiction

Addiction is a serious disease, but many effective treatments are available. Visit Penn’s Health Advocate website at www.healthadvocate.com/upenn for facts about addiction, recovery, and support services for faculty and staff.

Help Is Here

If you or a family member has a substance abuse problem, we encourage you to seek help. Penn provides free, confidential counseling services for you and your immediate family members through the Employee Assistance Program (EAP). The EAP will assist you with challenges that may interfere with your personal or professional life, including substance abuse.

For more information about the EAP’s counseling and referral services, visit the Employee Assistance Program web page or contact the Employee Assistance Program 24 hours a day, seven days a week at (866) 799-2329.

You can also refer to Penn’s addiction treatment publication for information about treatment benefits and resources.

Almanac October 18, 2022
Robert I. Toll, Trustee

Robert I. Toll, L’66, a former University Trustee, an emeritus member of the Carey Law School Board of Advisors, and the co-founder of transformative home construction company Toll Brothers, died on October 7 at home in Manhattan. He was 81.

Mr. Toll was born in Philadelphia suburb Elkins Park, Pennsylvania, to a father who was involved in Philadelphia real estate and who helped successfully rebuild his career after the Great Depression. Mr. Toll graduated from Cornell University in 1963 with a bachelor’s degree in political science, then graduated from Penn’s Law School three years later. He briefly worked at Philadelphia law firm Wolf, Block, Schorr, and Solis-Cohen, but then founded Toll Brothers with his younger brother Bruce in 1967. To start out, “we built two homes,” Mr. Toll recalled. “Instead of selling them, we used them as samples for the lots we owned down the street.” These sample homes landed the brothers contracts to build 20 more homes, which each sold for $17,500. Robert and Bruce Toll were among the first postwar housing developers to recognize how trends in highway construction would allow access to swaths of farmland for housing and shopping developments.

Over the next five decades, under Robert Toll’s leadership of the company as chair and CEO, Toll Brothers rapidly grew to become, as the company’s slogan boasts today, “America’s luxury home builder.” The company recognized shifting demographics in the U.S. during the 1970s and targeted baby boomers looking to trade upward. The Toll Brothers blueprint included targeted land purchases, appeals for quick zoning approval, and predominated buildings that allow room for personalized changes by buyers. These business decisions led to the proliferation of McManions and the implementation by zoning boards of two-acre lot sizes in many American suburbs, Toll Brothers became a force in the American housing market. Today, over 150,000 American families in 24 states live in a Toll Brothers-built home. Toll Brothers appeared on the Fortune 500 list, and Robert Toll spearheaded several philanthropic initiatives, including Seeds of Peace. In 2008 and 2009, Toll Brothers contributed to the Metropolitan Opera. The South- eastern Pennsylvania chapter of the American Red Cross, Jefferson Abington Hospital, Seeds of Peace, the Cornell Real Estate Council, Pennsylvania Campaign Choice, the Mayor’s Housing Partnership Council of Philadelphia, and Beth Shalom Synagogue of Elkins Park, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Toll is survived by his wife, Jane; his children, Laura, Deb, Rachel, L’03, Jacob, and Joshua; and other family members. Contributions in Mr. Toll’s memory may be directed to the Alumni Records Office at Suite 300, 2929 Walnut St., (215) 898-8136 or email record@ben.dev.upenn.edu.

Celebrate Open Access Week with Penn Libraries

Join the Penn Libraries in celebrating Open Access Week, an annual opportunity for the academic and research community to learn about the potential benefits of open access and share their insights with colleagues.

The Penn Libraries and the Penn Program in Environmental Humanities are marking this year’s theme, Open for Climate Justice, with a free public event on October 27: Seeking Environmental Justice in Philadelphia: Creating a Path for All Voices. Register to attend and hear about the Reeves family’s ongoing work to ameliorate harms and create opportunities in Grays Ferry, a predominantly Black community directly next to the refinery’s old north yard. This moderated conversation intends to prompt consideration of how rapid response collection and openly accessible archival practices can support community advocates and environmental justice.

Find Open Access Resources

The libraries support open access publishing year-round through a number of resources and initiatives, including providing support connected to the Office of Science and Technology Policy’s recent guidance to make all taxpayer-funded research available to the American public with no embargo and at no cost.

Browse the libraries’ online resources or contact a subject librarian to learn more about:

- The basics of open access publishing and how to share your work through open access and Creative Commons licenses.
- Identifying quality publishing venues for your work, including those that are open access.
- Understanding copyright as it relates to academic publishing and authors’ rights, fair use, and open access content.
- Sharing and accessing work, including research data, through ScholarlyCommons, Penn’s openly accessible institutional repository. New features and an updated look and feel are coming to the platform in 2023, including the ability to mint digital persistent identifiers for research outputs and integrate with ORCID for researchers.

Through November, the libraries are hosting series of workshops covering all elements of the academic publishing process in collaboration with the Graduate Student Center at Penn. Tune in to live virtual sessions covering citation management, impact metrics, promoting your work, selecting the right publishing venue, fair use, and more. Find the full suite of publishing workshops online and register to attend.

Sachs Program for Arts Innovation Grants

The Sachs Program for Arts Innovation has announced the opening of our 2022–2023 Grant Cycle.

We are offering six categories of grant opportunities this year—Artist Residence Grants, Community Partnerships Grants, Curricular Support Grants, Independent Creative Production Grants, Project Support Grants, and Student Grants. All Sachs Program grants support innovative arts activities throughout the University of Pennsylvania community, aligned with our mission to support and inspire creative practice and practitioners across the University and our broader community.

There are a few notable changes this year. We will be pausing our Alumni Awards for a year as we work with alumni to reassess that opportunity for future cycles. We have also shifted our Student Grants to an annual cycle and will be relaunching our Ben Art Bucks (smaller student grants) later this year. The third significant change is that Curricular Support Grants will be limited to non-standing faculty for research and current and future curricular classes.

Complete details about all Sachs Program grant opportunities are available on our website.

How to Apply

Important: The first step in applying for any grant opportunity is to review the grant opportunity information on our website and fill out a short inquiry form.

Declarations for Student Grants

- November 18, 2022—deadline to submit a grants inquiry form
- December 5, 2022—application deadline (midnight)

Declarations for All Annual Grants

- December 2, 2022—deadline to submit a grants inquiry form
- February 1, 2023—application deadline (midnight)

Complete information on all grant opportunities and guidelines can be found on the Sachs Program website.

If you’re interested in applying, even if you’re not quite sure yet what to apply for, we encourage you to reach out. The best way to do so is to submit an inquiry through the individual grant pages on our website. You can easily access these by clicking through the links below. We are happy to meet with anyone interested in applying.

Meetings are required to apply for an Artist Residency Grant or Community Partnerships Grant, but are optional for other categories. We also offer opportunities to review draft applications and are happy to talk through your ideas with you at any time throughout the application process. Complete details about Sachs Program grants and grantmaking are available on our website.

Call for Programs for the 2023 Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Symposium on Social Change

We invite your organization/department to plan a program in conjunction with this year’s symposium. Programs can include reflection, action, and response on/to contemporary issues and should raise issues of social change and social justice while incorporating Dr. King’s challenging visions to end racism and poverty, to strengthen and embrace diversity, and to support free expression.

For date availability, visit https://www.upenn.edu/aarc/mlk/calendar_mlk.htm. If interested, contact the African-American Resource Center no later than December 16, 2022, with your program idea. Email Colleen Bitten at cbitten@upenn.edu, Darin Toliver at toliverd@upenn.edu, or Steve Kocher at skocher@upenn.edu, or call (215) 898-0104.

40th Anniversary of Penn’s LGBT Center

This year, Penn’s LGBT Center celebrates its 40th anniversary. The center is the second oldest of its kind in the country, with its founding director, the late Robert Schoenberg, Gr’89 (Almanac August 31, 2021), originally working out of the Student Activities office in Houston Hall. The center’s current home in the historic Robert Schoenberg Carriage House, tucked away off Spruce Street, was made possible through a gift from David Goodhand, C’85, and Vincent Griski, W’85.

The center prides itself on inclusivity and students, faculty, and staff, often using the patio seating for informal lunches and reserving rooms to host events or work on projects.

“Penn’s LGBT Center has had my back since I started my PhD,” said Ira Globus-Harris, a doctoral candidate in computer and information sciences in the School of Engineering and Applied Science.

In addition to providing a safe space for creating community, the LGBT Center has advocated for administrative changes on campus, like creating a map of gender-neutral bathrooms and revamping name changes in Penn’s registration system, which now allows students to insert their pronouns and preferred name, Mx. Globus-Harris said. “Creating positive change at an institution as large as Penn is hard and slow work, and the center does an admirable job,” they said.

“The center holds fast to its social justice beginnings, focusing on both individuals and environmental factors, to ensure Penn’s LGBTQ+ communities feel welcome,” said Erin Cross, the center’s director. “We’ve done a lot, but we still have more to do. We want the center to be a place to study, chat, and celebrate—where you truly feel you belong, no matter who you are.”

“Don’t sleep on the LGBT Center,” said Paul Richards, chief of staff and senior director of communications in the division of finance. “A lot of people think of the LGBT Center as a resource for students, which it absolutely is. But their wide programming shows that it’s also a wonderful resource for staff.”

Penn’s LGBT Center by the Numbers
• 40 years in existence
• 17 consecutive years on Campus Pride’s “Best of the Best”
• 15% of Penn’s student population self-identify as LGBTQ+
• 94 faculty members on the “Out List,” a self-selected group designed to draw attention to LGBTQ+ professors
• 24 active student groups
• 162 events and trainings held during the 2021-2022 academic year
• 7 full-time staff members since the center’s founding
